

EDITORIAL

Indexes as volatility trackers or creators?

After decades of passive index funds and index-linked ETFs as the retail and institutional investment vehicles of choice for public markets, now the background market conditions underlying their rise have gone through drastic change – raising the question of how viable they still are.

Featured stories from the July 2025 issue of Asia Asset Management

- Caution is key
- Interview with S&P DJI’s Dan Draper
- New CMEPA law in Philippines set to boost long term savings
- New ETFs Boost Taiwan Investing
- Indexing in Asia
- Asian bonds remain resilient
- An inflection point
- At a crossroads
- AAM’s 13th Malaysia Roundtable

Latest News

Korea Investment Corp announces new long-term vision and strategic priorities

| 3 July 2025

Investments: The new vision is centred around transforming KIC into a top global investor

Singapore’s IFS Asset Management launches second private credit fund

| 3 July 2025

Market Access: While the fund can invest across Asia Pacific, the primary focus of the fund remains on Singapore-based SMEs

Malaysia’s KWAP announces 12 managers for 6 billion ringgit Dana Pemacu programme

| 3 July 2025

Pensions: The Dana Pemacu programme is divided into three main mandates: private equity, infrastructure, and real estate

